

I did the watering on the school plot (tunnel) today and smelt the aroma of food whilst I was there...one of the perks is I have free dinners!

The sweet spuds doing OK

They are big enough to start picking, but I already have tea organised for tonight!

Colley Gate Gardening Club's Annual Open Show is tomorrow, so the garage is chock-a...

I look after 'em on our site...woodchip...and top soil...

Hoss muck

The horrorvilles, oops I mean the children, had their longest runner bean competition on tuesday - this is the best photo of them keeping still!!

Red over wintering onion sets have been started off, with a top dressing of charge, watered well. I am also trialling my own compost again

The peas are still doing well, so I shall be picking these tomorrow for the show

The piddle is working on keeping away the badger on my plot (pathways), and on the back lawn, the foxes keep crapping! As you can see, it is nice and clear...clearer than some of my wine!
